Noel Webster

(10/16/1758 – 5/28/1843)

Noah Webster (JR) was a Lexicographer, American school reformer, textbook pioneer, political writer, editor and author. He has been called the "Father of American Scholarship and Education". His "Blue-backed Speller" books taught five generations of American children how to spell and read. Webster's name has become synonymous with "dictionary" in the United States, especially the modern Merriam-Webster dictionary that was first published in 1828 as An American Dictionary of the English Language. Born in West Hartford, CT, Webster graduated from Yale College in 1778. He was a strong supporter of the American Revolution and the ratification of the United States Constitution. In 1793, Alexander Hamilton recruited Webster to move to New York City and become an editor for a Federalist Party newspaper. He returned to Connecticut in 1798 and served in the Connecticut House of Representatives. Webster founded the Connecticut Society for the Abolition of Slavery in 1791 but later became somewhat disillusioned with the abolitionist movement. In 1806 Webster published his first dictionary followed by a second updated printing in 1828. While working on a second volume of his dictionary, Webster died in 1843, and the rights to the dictionary were acquired by George and Charles Merriam.
